HARVARD PILGRIM HEALTH CARE FOUNDATION AWARDS
NEARLY $620,000 IN NEW HEALTHY FOOD FUND GRANTS TO 25 NOT-FOR-PROFIT FRESH FOOD ACCESS PROGRAMS IN CT, ME, MA, AND NH

Brings total Harvard Pilgrim Healthy Food Fund grants since launch in 2016 to $4.6 million; new grants to support volunteer-powered community food programs bringing fresh, local food to low-income families in region

(Wellesley, MA) – Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Foundation today announced it has awarded nearly $620,000 in new Healthy Food Fund grants to 25 not-for-profit community food access initiatives that grow, glean or distribute fresh produce to low-income families and older adults in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire. Grant awards are renewable for two additional years. These new grants bring the total amount of Healthy Food Fund grants since the program was launched in 2016 to $4.6 million.

“Our goal for this next phase of the Harvard Pilgrim Healthy Food Fund is to mobilize the energy of local community members and corporate volunteers to grow, glean and provide more free, fresh produce for low-income families across New England, creating a movement of ‘neighbors feeding neighbors,’” said Karen Voci, President of Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Foundation. “Helping families eat in healthier ways, and encouraging support for food system improvements, we believe will lead to healthier people and healthier communities.”
